Away Team's Album Out Now, Making Waves In This "Topsy Turvy World"

The Away Team is singer-songwriter, multi-instrumentalist Penny Little and musician Nik Green, both keyboard savants who turned tickling the ivories into danceable, quirky pop rock. Formed in 1994, the electronic duo has performed at rallies, festivals, clubs, house parties, and performed in the Unconventional Tour 2008, joined by other musicians during their eight-city 7,200 mile tour of the US. For their latest album "Topsy Turvy World" Nik and Penny collaborated with Ben Hurley, producing a collection of modern pop songs with splashes of dance, country, jam, rock, world, and lyrics that are at times personal and political.

Penny Little aka Little Savage used to be a solo pianist mixing in improvisations with classical pieces. After touring in Japan, she met guitarist Ben Hurley in Hawaii and they recorded the album 'In a Light Garden'. She became the vocalist for band White Feather and toured around Europe.

Then there's Nik Green, a native of the UK who has been producing electronic dance/ambient music since the 1980's. He recorded and toured with the band Blue Murder for seven years and engineered several hit albums. They come from different worlds but together they create a new one, a topsy-turvy realm that cannot be ignored.

If The Away Team were to describe their sound, it's definitely 'out there' and that's not exactly a bad thing. They've got the music and talents to back it up. With the release of their new album "Topsy Turvy World, they are launching another Unconventional Tour "mashup of music, media, and free speech", beginning with a series of CD Release Parties on the West Coast.
